The Leisure Kings, Red Baron and His Midtown Blowers

December 2

Jazz Kitchen

I wish this were a first hand review of The Leisure Kings show with Red Baron and His Midtown Blowers, but it is not. I was working at the Red Key that night. I did get to hang out with the cool kids though. Several people stopped by the Red Key on the way to the concert. The Born Again Floozies were the first to arrive, and they settled in the back. Jeff Sample (the talent buyer for Birdy's and the Upper Room) and Wick (indianapolismusic.net) sat at the bar. Scott Rudicel (Ruditoonz) and Dusty Privette (The Fabulous Lettuce Monkeys) settled in at a table. Dan McNeal (Indy's Music Channel) tucked in to the corner booth. I felt a little Cinderella-like when everyone rushed out the door to the Jazz Kitchen.

From all accounts it was a great show. Mike Wiltrout and Sean Baker (The Leisure Kings) were in great form. The band, led by Brent Wallarab sounded great. Both shows were sold out, Mike breathed fire (safely outdoors) and they got a standing ovation.

I did not lose a glass slipper at midnight, but I was cleaning the grill at 2:00 am. And I'm still waiting on Prince Charming.
